

Cervélo R3 Disc

→ The deceptively simple-looking R3 goes disc for 2016. Having generated a dedicated fan base, the razor-sharp, race-orientated geometry remains the same. Always one of the classiest-looking bikes, its clean lines are untroubled by the addition of discs, despite having been beefed up to deal with the additional forces they place on the frame.

Mason Resolution Dura-Ace Di2 Hydro

→ A dream bike with room for mudguards and a rack? Both exotic and practical, this is a bike that'll see you through the rigours of winter without sacrificing the fun you'll have on it come summer. Proving that steel needn't be retro, it features oversize Columbus tubing, disc brakes and electronic gearing. If you only own one bike, this would be a great choice.
